Frequently Asked Questions about The Color Code Personality Assessment:

Q: Why the "Color Code?" What do colors have to do with my personality?

A: The Color Code uses colors as a teaching metaphor. Other programs may use complicated terminology or a series of letters representing complicated terminology that complicate retention and application in the minds of the end-users.

The Color Code uses the following colors:

- RED – "Red" personalities are motivated by power, or the ability to get things done and move from Point A to Point B. They are focused, proactive, natural leaders and can be argumentative
- BLUE – "Blue" personalities are motivated by intimacy, or connecting and sharing deeply and meaningfully with others. They are quality-oriented, nurturing, analytical and emotionally intense
- WHITE – "White" personalities are motivated by peace, or the ability to stay calm even in the midst of conflict. They are kind, self-regulated, diplomatic and timid
- YELLOW – "Yellow" personalities are motivated by fun, or living in and enjoying the moment. They are spontaneous, charismatic, sociable and forgetful.
